Helpful Hints

Try to sell in bundles, like "This Table Buy 1 Get 1 Free" or this box "3 Items For $5". It's really important you know your prices because some items may get mixed or dropped in the bargain bins by mistake by your customers. Don't back down if someone insists it was in the bargain bin, gently inform them another customer must have placed it there by mistake.

You may have paid $50 for that blender and never used it, but selling it for $40 will be tough. Yes $10 off is a good deal for someone, however if they buy it at the store they get a warranty and they get to take it back if it doesn't work or something goes wrong or they change their mind. You may have more luck starting with $20—that's a price hard to walk away from.

Price things in .25 cent increments, it's less hassle.

The Witching Hour: Reduce prices after 1 p.m. You only have a few hours left to get rid of stuff, now's the time to hustle and move the stuff off the tables and into your customers vehicles...
